

Market overview

'Ramaphoria' prospects were short-lived in 2018 as SA's structural deficiencies and the shackles of state capture became more evident. In addition, uncertainty surrounding the US-China trade war, Brexit and fears of a global growth slowdown in 2019 sparked a significant change in investor risk appetite. This resulted in disappointing equity returns. Global equity lost 9.4% in US dollar terms for the year, while the JSE All Share retreated 8.5%. Local bonds posted a 7.7% return. SA property was the worst performing asset class, losing 25.0%. The rand weakened 16.3% relative to the dollar, providing some relief for the Fund.

Portfolio review

The Fund returned -0.1% for the year, compared to the average return for peer funds of -1.9%. The overweight position to resources and high global allocation assisted performance relative to peers during a tough year. These positives, however, were negated by the systematic drawdown in local equities.

Coronation had a tough 2018 due to a high equity and property allocation, as well as holdings in underperforming shares such as MTN and British American Tobacco (BTI). On Christmas eve MTN reported they had received notice from the Central Bank of Nigeria that it was reversing a potential claim for $8 billion. This means MTN can proceed with the planned listing of MTN Nigeria and repatriate profits from Nigeria. There is no doubt that the recent issues in Nigeria will have a sentiment overhang on the stock. This may possibly explain why there has not yet been a return to the early August price levels following this positive news.

In light of the risks present in the global and local environments, Investec maintain their large allocation to high quality global equities generating high and sustainable returns on invested capital. Apart from their excellent cash-generation and returns on capital, such companies have the ability to grow with a lower dependence on the economic cycle than the average business. In a similar vein, they have sought out locally-listed global businesses with little dependence on the local economy. Locally, the best opportunity according to Investec remains SA government bonds, offering attractive risk-adjusted yields.

Prescient's domestic defensive mandate performed relatively well for the year, returning 3.1%. The low equity allocation coupled with their short duration fixed interest instruments supported performance. We are pleased this mandate had a positive return during a volatile period, fulfilling their capital protection role in the Fund.

Prudential remains overweight SA equities given their positive view on valuations. They prefer resources shares with exposure to global growth such as Sasol and Anglo American, but also find value in financials such as Standard Bank and Old Mutual. They remain underweight retail stocks and long duration bonds remain a key investment.

The Fund's global allocation performed well in rands, mainly due to rand depreciation.

Portfolio positioning and outlook

The rate of global growth is likely to slow in 2019 and US interest rates are anticipated to rise further, although perhaps by not as much as initially expected. If the US interest rate hike cycle turns in response to lower economic growth concerns and the Chinese authorities embark on some form of stimulus, we may see better returns in 2019. An agreement between the US and China on trade negotiations will also help to alleviate fears in the market. We are attracted to the high dividend yield from local equities, while local bonds provide reasonable yields. Looking forward, although there are risks, in our opinion the market is providing areas of great investment opportunity for patient investors.

Duration – a measure of the sensitivity of the price of a fixed-income investment to a change in interest rates. Duration is expressed as a number of years.
